Pip's Christmas Countdown: $0 Launch Campaign

Goal: maximum free reach, Nov 3 to Dec 18, 2026, the window for gifts to arrive by Christmas. Every channel below costs nothing.

The big idea: give away Day 1, sell the other 49

Parents share free printables far more than ads. Every post points to one free 4-page pack (countdown tracker + Day 1 and Day 2 pages). Each printed page ends with "the full book is on Amazon", so the free pack keeps selling inside homes and classrooms. The hook for every post: "Can you find Little Star?", which turns posts into a comment game, and comments are what the Instagram and Facebook algorithms reward.

Channels, ranked by free reach for this book

#	Channel	Why it works	What to post
1	Pinterest	Parents plan Christmas activities on Pinterest. Pins keep getting found for months, not hours. Biggest free channel for printables.	5 to 10 pins a week from the coloring pages, each linking to the free pack or the Amazon page.
2	YouTube Shorts / TikTok / Reels	Short videos of a page being colored, with the rhyme read aloud, get pushed to strangers for free. You already have the BlobbyWorld video pipeline.	One 20-40 second "color with Pip" video per countdown day.
3	Instagram (feed + Stories)	Builds the brand; Stories polls and "find the star" questions get replies.	3 feed posts a week + daily Story in December.
4	Facebook parent and homeschool groups	Huge, active audiences who ask for "Christmas activities for kids". Only post the FREE pack, and only where group rules allow.	The free pack, with a short friendly note. Never a sales link alone.
5	Teachers / preschools	One preschool teacher printing Day 1 for a class puts the book in front of 20 families.	Email the free pack to local preschools, libraries and daycares in Wesley Chapel.
6	Amazon itself (free)	Author Central page links all 3 Blobby World books; A+ Content (free) adds big images to the listing.	Set up Author Central bio + A+ Content once the book is live.

Short-video script (20-40 seconds, one per countdown day)

- 0-3s: close-up of the page with the hook text on screen: "Day 7. Can you find Little Star?"
- 3-20s: time-lapse of the page being colored (crayon or a coloring app), with the day's rhyme read aloud.

- 20-30s: zoom onto Little Star's hiding spot. "Found her!" Then the cover for 2 seconds with "Pip's Christmas Countdown on Amazon".
- Your BlobbyWorld pipeline (storyboard, narration, MP4 assembly) can render all 25 of these automatically from the page art and captions.

Rules that protect the book

- Never offer anything (free copies, gift cards, refunds) in exchange for an Amazon review. Amazon removes those reviews and can penalize the account. Just ask real buyers: "If Pip made your countdown cozier, a quick review helps other parents find him."
- In Facebook groups, follow each group's self-promotion rules; share the free pack, not just a sales link.
- Use only the book's own art. No trending songs with copyrighted lyrics in videos; use the platform's free music library.

If you later want paid help

The single best paid add-on is an Amazon Sponsored Products ad capped at $5 a day, keyword-targeted to "christmas coloring book for toddlers", "advent activity book for kids" and "penguin coloring book". It is optional; nothing above depends on it.
